7 Life-Saving Steps That Every Pet Owner Should Know

Dr.Becker

This article was made available from the GSP Club of America members email list

Story at-a-glance:

- Having an emergency plan in place ahead of time can save your pet's life if and when an emergency medical condition occurs
- Severe bleeding, fractured bones, seizures and ingesting a known poison are examples of emergencies that require immediate veterinary care
- You should decide now which emergency veterinary clinic you'll use and keep an emergency file with important information in a handy place

There may come a time in your pet's life when he needs emergency veterinary care. Having a plan in place ahead of time can literally save your pet's life if and when that time comes. In that moment, the last thing you want to be thinking about is where to go for help and how to get to the emergency clinic. Minutes, and even seconds, may count, so you'll want to be well prepared in advance. Perhaps most important, however, is knowing when to seek emergency care. If in doubt, contact your veterinarian or emergency veterinary clinic immediately. It's best to err on the side of caution, and if you can't get through to your veterinarian or it's after hours, go directly to your closest emergency veterinary clinic.

13 Animal Emergencies That Require Immediate Care

Life-threatening conditions often involve organ failure, sepsis (full-body infection) or bloat, which is a condition in which a dog's stomach becomes distended and twists around on itself. Disseminated intravascular coagulopathy (DIC) is another life-threatening condition, in this case a bleeding disorder that may result from infection or autoimmune disease.

The 13 medical conditions, symptoms and scenarios that follow, compiled by the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA), also warrant emergency veterinary attention.1 This is not an all-inclusive list, but if you notice any of the following, get your pet to an emergency veterinary clinic immediately.

- Severe bleeding or bleeding that doesn't stop within five minutes
- Choking, difficulty breathing or nonstop coughing and gagging
- Bleeding from nose, mouth or rectum; coughing up blood or blood in urine
- Inability to urinate or pass feces (stool), or obvious pain associated with urinating or passing stool
- Injuries to your pet's eye(s)
- You suspect or know your pet has eaten something poisonous (such as antifreeze, xylitol, chocolate, rodent poison, etc.)
- Seizures and/or staggering
- Fractured bones, severe lameness or inability to move leg(s)
- Obvious signs of pain or extreme anxiety
- Heat stress or heatstroke

- Severe vomiting or diarrhea – more than two episodes in a 24-hour period, or either of these combined with obvious illness or any of the other problems listed here
- Refusal to drink for 24 hours or more
- Unconsciousness

In addition, I would add the following true medical emergencies to this list:

- Penetrating wounds to the chest, including deep lacerations or punctures
- A fever over 104 degrees Fahrenheit with profound lethargy
- Bulging eyes and sudden blindness
- Burns or injuries in which a bone is exposed
- Loss of balance (inability to right herself or falls over due to inability to maintain balance) It's important not to wait for a true medical emergency to start thinking about emergency care.

7 Preparatory Steps That Could Save Your Pet's Life in an Emergency

AVMA recommends knowing the following seven things well in advance so you're ready to spring into action in the event of an actual emergency.

1. Your vet's emergency phone number
2. The local emergency clinic number
3. How to get to the emergency clinic
4. Poison Control number
5. How to perform basic CPR on your pet
6. How to stop bleeding/apply a basic pressure wrap

7. How to muzzle your pet (to keep an injured pet from biting you) with a homemade muzzle

I also recommend a six-step emergency plan to help you prepare well in advance in the event you ever need to take your pet to an emergency veterinary clinic:

1. Deciding which emergency clinic to use
2. Visiting the clinic, or if that's not possible, making a phone call to gather specific information
3. Deciding how you'll pay for emergency services. I recommend keeping the credit card information you would use in case of emergencies included in your emergency file
4. Learning about any special policies or procedures the clinic has in place
5. Creating an emergency file to keep on hand
6. Deciding ahead of time how you feel about difficult subjects like invasive procedures, resuscitation and euthanasia It can be difficult to determine when your pet needs to be seen by a veterinarian immediately and when it's OK to wait until the next morning or later in the week. In many cases, you can go with your gut instinct. If your pet is suffering severely, in pain, unable to perform basic functions like walking, breathing normally or eliminating, or becomes unresponsive or severely agitated, immediate care is required.

What Symptoms Require Urgent, but Not Immediate, Veterinary Care?

More often, however, you're likely to encounter situations that require urgent care, such as within the next 12 hours, but not necessarily a trip to an emergency clinic. Examples of conditions that require urgent care, such as your veterinarian's next available appointment, include:

- Limping
- Lumps
- Rashes
- Parasites
- Mild diarrhea
- Low-grade fever

Choking: One Emergency You Should Be Prepared For

In most emergency situations, it's best to get to an emergency clinic as soon as possible. But if your pet is choking, her life is in immediate danger and she might not make it to a clinic. In this case, taking matters into your own hands could save your pet's life. Choking is most common among dogs (though may also happen in cats). If you have a dog, in particular, I suggest you become familiar with how to perform the Heimlich maneuver. Hopefully you'll never need to use the tips provided in this article, but the truth is that no one ever expects an emergency. Taking 20 minutes now to get prepared can make all the difference if the unexpected happens. It's relatively simple and could save your pet's life. Once the object is cleared from your pet's airway, get him to your veterinarian or an emergency clinic immediately. Another tool you can learn now to potentially save your pet's life in an emergency is CPR. The American Red Cross offers classes in many areas that allow you to receive hands-on training with an animal mannequin.

CKC Update: New Animal Protection Laws in British Columbia and Toronto, ON

CKC Denounces Recent Amendment to Toronto Animal Control Bylaw

In January, CKC provided members with an update regarding proposed amendments to Toronto animal control bylaw Chapter 349, Animals and included the results of a City survey in which Toronto CKC members and other local groups were invited to participate during the consultation process.

Most recently, CKC learned that an additional amendment was added to the bylaw and included a ban on choke collars, choke chains and prong collars—integral and effective tools used responsibly by dog exhibitors, trainers and evaluators.

Despite the fact that the survey results showed that 55% of respondents disagreed with a complete ban on these collars, and despite a City staff report recommending a ban on such collars for tethering purposes only, the move to an outright ban was later made by Council.

As you can imagine, CKC is extremely disappointed by this recent decision that clearly does not represent the voice of our members and the many Toronto dog owners.

While we applaud the efforts of the City to strengthen its animal control bylaw, particularly where dangerous dogs are concerned, we think the decision to ban these collars is misguided and falls short of its intent to target irresponsible dog owners.

CKC would like to set the record straight and will be contacting members of Council in an effort to overturn the ban, in support of caring and responsible dog owners and their dogs.

Update: New BC Animal Welfare Legislation

As you may know, CKC has been working with the BC government and the BC SPCA since April, 2016 to develop new animal welfare laws that will assist the BC SPCA in monitoring and taking action against irresponsible breeders.

CKC has held a number of discussions with BC government officials throughout the past year and also engaged our member breeders with a BC Government survey during the consultation process, to ensure their interests were well represented.

Throughout our discussions, we have always maintained that licensing and registration would provide an unnecessary burden to CKC members in terms of cost, duplication and an extra layer of governance, and discussed opportunities that would recognize and reward CKC member breeders.

Most recently, the BC Government introduced Bill 7 - 2017: Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Amendment Act. The proposed Bill largely appears to be an enabling piece of legislation, which contemplates both licensing and/or registration schemes—the details of which will be defined by future regulations. It is our understanding that the intent will be to pass Bill 7 during this spring session, with regulations to follow in the summer or fall.

We understand there may be concern about the proposed legislation, and we continue to monitor activity surrounding Bill 7 and the development of future regulations. CKC also remains in continued dialogue with the BC SPCA and the BC government, in support of responsible breeders.

Make Your Opinion Heard!

Biography for Regional Specialty Show Judge Kay Sneath

I have been involved in the sport of dogs since 1972. I began with Afghans, but since 1975 I am best known for breeding and exhibiting Borzois under the Marakhoff prefix. Together with my family we have produced many "Best in Show" winners and champions in numerous countries. I commenced judging in 1998 and have had the privilege of judging throughout Australia, N. Zealand, Japan and USA.

I have had a strong connection with German Shorthaired Pointers and was honoured to judge a specialty for the NSW GSH Pointer Club. This is a privilege usually reserved for a breeder judge. I have also judged "Gundog" (as we call them) specialties in Queensland and New Zealand. Again, an honour for a "hound" person.

I am absolutely honoured and delighted to adjudicate at the Erie Shores Kennel Club Shows.
